Course description

This course takes an in-depth look into Chinese political institutions and behaviors through a comparative perspective. It is divided into four modules. Module one overviews the historical development of the Chinese state and explores how its imperial legacies have shaped political norms and practices in the modern era. Module two examines the roles and functions of the PRC's major political institutions, including the Party, the central and local bureaucracy, the people's congresses, and the judiciary. We hope to understand how those institutions engage with each other in policymaking and implementation, and when tensions will arise among different agencies. Module three looks into three major "paradigm shifts" in modern Chinese politics, namely Mao's socialist transformation in 1949, Deng's reform and opening-up in 1978, and Xi's power consolidation since 2012. We will discuss the political and economic challenges those reforms aim to address, and their effects and consequences. Lastly, module four explores major governance challenges facing the Chinese regime, including corruption, censorship and propaganda, ethnic conflicts, among many others.

Course credit information

This is a 3-credit course. This class meets for two, 50-minute class periods each week over the spring semester and carries the expectation that students will work on course learning activities (reading, writing, problem sets, studying, etc.) for about 2 hours out of the classroom for every class period. The syllabus includes additional information about meeting times and expectations for student work.

Textbooks

1. Dreyer, June Teufel. 2019. China's Political System: Modernization and Tradition. 10th edition. Routledge. (Thereafter "Dreyer")
2. Saich, Tony. 2015. Governance and Politics of China. 4th edition. Palgrave Macmillan. (Thereafter "Saich")
3. Zheng, Yongnian, and Lance L. P. Gore (eds.) 2020. The Chinese Communist Party in Action: Consolidating Party Rule. 1st edition. Routledge. (Thereafter, "Zheng and Gore eds.")

Journal articles and book chapters will be assigned as supplemental readings. All materials are available on the Canvas course page.

Grading Criteria

There are four major components of the course grade, namely:

- Term Paper (30%). Students are required to complete a term paper that analyzes a major domestic challenge that faces the contemporary Chinese leadership. Potential topics include but are not limited to climate change, corruption, censorship and propaganda, demographic decline, economic slowdown, side effects of the "zero-Covid" policy, etc. The paper should (1) define the issue, (2) identify the underlying causes and factors that contribute to the challenge, (3) summarize existing studies on the issue, and (4) propose a policy solution to mitigate the problem. The length of the term paper should be no longer than 20 double-spaced pages. Each student is required to schedule an appointment with the instructor in advance to discuss their topic proposal.
- Midterm Exam (30%). The midterm will be a close-book, one-hour exam. The midterm will cover all materials in the first half semester. The instructor will hold a review session before the midterm. The exam will take place on March 7, 2022.
- Final Exam (30%). The final will be a cumulative, close-book, 1.5-hour exam. Everything covered throughout the semester may be tested. The instructor will hold a review session before the final. The exam will take place on May 11, 2022.
- Participation (10%). Attendance to the class is mandatory. Each unexcused absence will result in the loss of 0.5% of your total grade.

Grading Scale: We will use the University grading scale for this course.

A	93-100
AB	88-92.5
B	83-87.5
BC	78 – 82.5
C	70 – 77.5
D	60 – 69.5
F	0 – 59.5

b. Classroom Policies

Plagiarism and Academic Honesty

By virtue of enrollment, each student agrees to uphold the high academic standards of the University of Wisconsin-Madison; academic misconduct is behavior that negatively impacts the integrity of the institution. Cheating, fabrication, plagiarism, unauthorized collaboration, and helping others commit these previously listed acts are examples of misconduct which may result in disciplinary action. Examples of disciplinary action include, but is not limited to, failure on the assignment/course, written reprimand, disciplinary probation, suspension, or expulsion. To understand more about plagiarism and proper attribution of sources, please consult the Writing Center, at: <https://writing.wisc.edu/>.

Accommodations for Students with Disabilities

The University of Wisconsin-Madison supports the right of all enrolled students to a full and equal educational opportunity. The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), Wisconsin State Statute (36.12), and UW-Madison policy (Faculty Document 1071) requires that students with disabilities be reasonably accommodated in instruction and campus life. Reasonable accommodations for students with disabilities is a shared faculty and student responsibility. Students are expected to inform McBurney Disability Resource Center (<https://mcburney.wisc.edu/>) and the instructor of their need for instructional accommodations by the end of the third week of the semester, or as soon as possible after a disability has been incurred or recognized. I will work either directly with the student [you] or in coordination with the McBurney Center to identify and provide reasonable instructional accommodations. I am more than happy to accommodate your needs, but it is your responsibility to complete this process officially and in a timely manner, within three weeks of course inception (or upon the recognition of a disability).

Diversity and Inclusion

Diversity is a source of strength, creativity, and innovation for UW-Madison. We value the contributions of each person and respect the profound ways their identity, culture, background, experience, status, abilities, and opinion enrich the university community. We commit ourselves to the pursuit of excellence in teaching, research, outreach, and diversity as inextricably linked goals. The University of Wisconsin-Madison fulfills its public mission by creating a welcoming and inclusive community for people from every background – people who as students, faculty, and staff serve Wisconsin and the world.
